

The 2010 Playtex MoonWalk London event is a huge fundraising event that sees thousands of bra-clad power walkers striding through Hyde Park at night in support of the charity organisation Walk The Walk.

Taking place for the 13th year in 2010, the Playtex MoonWalk promises to be a spectacular charity event celebrating more than a decade of MoonWalking. Two of our accounts department girls, Leigh and Line took part and raised nearly £600.00 for Breast Cancer Research.

The girls quoted 'our highlights of the night were watching the sun rise over the city, the many volunteers and drunks cheering us on, and overtaking people that started in earlier groups than us (competitive streak coming out).

The last mile was definitely the longest (could have been due to the fact that it was actually 1.2 mile) so it was with immense pride and happiness that we walked over the finish line 7.5 hours later.'
